

POLITICALLY BENIGN

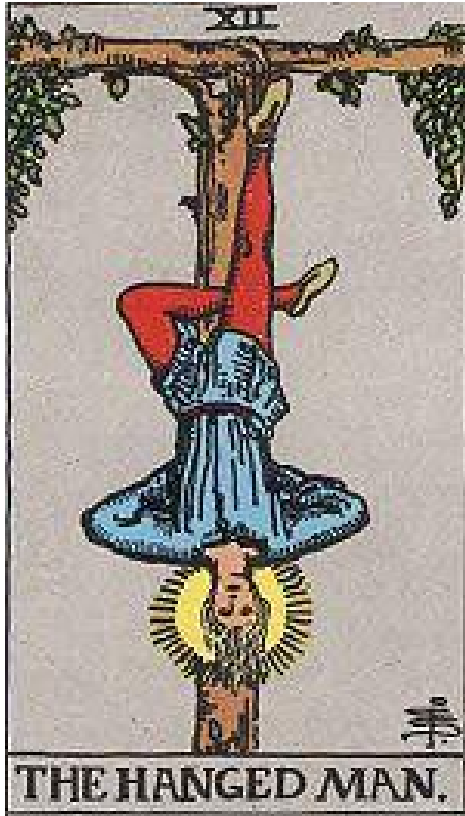

THE NEW SEXISM

The Rules are changing so slowly you won't even notice. This is a Positive change based on societies past actions and behaviors. Watch a movie from the 90's, I think you will understand. Trends in behaviors are seen from decade to decade throughout history, there is plenty of evidence of this and I sincerely hope you aren't asking "what kind of trends" ? Trends in crime, trends in language, technology trends are what is lighting are brains on fire in the last 20 years. The industrial revolution is all but done and the technology revolution is by far underway. What will not be trending is any shake up in the Hierarchical Structure in which the Human Being has determined to be the evolution of a common oneness and equality. No nation or country is going to eventually rule the world and that is what the fighting and hate is all about, but hey that's our human Nature isn't it. I am truly disappointed in the so called Sexism, Credism and Racism that are becoming so tiresome and self fulfilling it just seems as if the Human Being is committing a slow and gradual suicide of sorts. The sarcastic absurdity of some of the arguments I hear convinces me that being in the wrong somehow promotes the right. Yet we are still obsessed with having a Martyr for every little indiscretion in this world of hours. Blood Let.

Everyone I seem to have the fortune of conversing with seems a bit irrational as if the person with whom I'm speaking is becoming the great Sphinx talking to me in Riddles with cryptic shadows all over the place regarding many aspects of vision, life and knowledge but if I press them on this or ask a question on any level, I never receive satisfaction in an answer, usually quite the contrary. This leads me to believe that this person is not the great sphinx-esque knowledgeable person I was believing this person to be; just an average person with average knowledge and the wisdom I receive from talking to most people is deriving from my own experience, knowledge and possibly a metacognitive up-link to something more and beyond our normal empirical and rational perception of the reality we live here, on this plane of existence here on Planet Earth. Shining daily is the Sun here in our Solar System which ultimately is the only true reality we have, our protection, our heat as the only inhabitable planet based on our evolved tolerances, and of course a wonderful form of energy. Fortunately the Sun's nuclear battery won't be going out for a while which gives us plenty of time to destroy one another or embrace one another in a continued effort to grow and build a smarter society. Woman must Partner Man. It will never be the other way around and that is what frustrates Woman.

Man and Woman Woman and Man Side by Side Hand in Hand. Where is this to lead us? Woman is becoming more independent than ever and this is a good thing. The world's population is climbing quite high and a woman being the child rearer as her job to the man's provider job is slowly waning, albeit there should always be a need for natural childbirth, despite the many technologies today regarding and providing a form of sexless childbirth. Man on the other hand has actually begun to relax a little and be less threatened by the professional woman who provides for herself and why wouldn't he, we are still and constantly evolving. When the woman acts like she is suddenly owed something for whatever reason and demands we pay her back for all of histories misdeeds in the form of power and control, well that's where the problem lies. The percentage of man to woman in power should always favor the man, but that folly aside, man and woman find it very difficult to even cooperate on an emotional and intelligent level when the relationship is challenged with demand and resistance and disrespect. I have heard that man and womans brain act differently, I don't know this to be accurate, but I am pretty sure that the past million or so years during the human beings development has charged our way of thinking and behaving with one another. Both man and woman need to look at how far we have come together and recognize that it can't be both ways. Child Support.

From day one, the snake in the tree is what the common analogy is for evil facing man and woman. Not man or woman but both. This is somewhat aggravating isn't it? Especially now in this age when the planet is warring over ideologies, crede and sexuality. What should man and woman do? I see the twentieth century as a major, major turning point in our evolution as the social experiment that our existence ultimately seems to be. It was seemingly the end of 'world conquering', not that it can't happen in the future, however, I do believe our consciousness as a civilized society will protect us from the gullibility we as an average human in the past were most likely to encourage and/or support. The vast access to information can often assist us in our decision making but with the vast outlets of information we need to also be careful as of what to believe. There is constantly someone in my life attempting to convince me of something, whether small or big and these are usually just casual conversations. With Moore's Law established we humans should follow that business model or algorithm in order to gain more knowledge and wisdom for the same cost or effort. I've noticed a lot of competitive persuasion out here as of late and that will most likely be our downfall.

She held the serpent on high as if to challenge others belief systems as well as her own and gazed at its beguiling charm. He looked at her in amazement as if seeing something special for the first time in his sheltered and young life. Man and woman start young. Young being the operative word because it is relative yet at the same time complementary and sought after by those who are careworn and aged in life which the serpent can often times represent, creating lust which some fear and call evil, and therein lies a hypocrisy. Man and woman in their confused charm and alluring ways are both a lot like the serpent in the tree as we attempt to understand one another with distrust being the largest snake in the tree and overcoming that large nuance is what the serpent symbolism mostly and unashamedly is all about. Furthering man and womans philosophical conundrum here in this world of our shared symbiotic existence with nature and the elements granted us from the universe all around. As we begin to move away from and understand the archaic and often times draconian serpent symbolism we start to see one another again in a new light that is faith and future.